TEEN SAVES LIFE OF WOMAN WHO SAVED HIM

In an amazing coincidence, a New York State teenager saved the life of a woman and then discovered that she saved his life when he was a child.

Six and a half years ago, Kevin Stephan, then aged 11, was playing baseball when a player accidentally hit him with a bat. Kevin fell down and his heart stopped. Penny Brown, the mother of another player, was watching the game. Penny usually worked in the evenings as a nurse, but luckily that evening she wasn't working. Penny ran to help Kevin and saved his life.

Nearly seven years later, Kevin was washing up in the kitchen of the Hillview Restaurant in Buffalo, New York State. Normally, 17-year-old Kevin had school in the afternoon, but that week there were exams, and he didn't have any classes. At about 2pm, Penny Brown was having lunch with her family in the restaurant. She was eating when some food got stuck in her throat. She was very frightened because she couldn't breathe.

Kevin was a volunteer firefighter in his free time and he ran to help. A waitress tried to help her, but the food was still stuck in Penny's throat. Kevin pulled his hands quickly into her stomach and saved Penny's life. He didn't know it was Penny, but his mother, Lorraine Stephan, was also having lunch in the restaurant. She realised that Penny was the woman who saved Kevin's life, seven years before, at the baseball game. Both Penny and Kevin were completely amazed by the coincidence!

The director of the American Red Cross in Buffalo said: "this story shows the importance of learning first aid. After only four hours of training, Kevin was able to save Penny's life."

It was 5pm that day. It was the beginning of winter, and it was almost dark. Jack, Tom and I were walking back home from school. They were my brothers. Jack was 15. He had rough brown hair and blue eyes with a straight and sharp look. On the other hand, Tom, who was 13, had dark smooth hair and brown eyes. He was much nicer and a bit taller than Jack, but we were all like friends. For me, I was a normal and calm girl. I was around 11, but I had a phobia from dark places.
